II.1.4) Short description:

The GSA aims to procure for its Galileo Security Monitoring Centre (hereinafter "GSMC") a security accredited operational interface system that connects each of the appropriate GSA systems and their instances to every workstation in the operational area, therefore allowing multiple users to access any of the interconnected systems' instances via any of the workstations.

The GSMC is under significant space constraints with the operational area limited to a fixed one system per work station layout. This is an inflexible design which, unchanged, will have severe implications to future expansion of the GSMC as it will become impossible to deploy the amount of systems required. A solution is therefore necessary to deliver a versatile operational interface which can evolve with the GSMC and its needs.

II.2.4) Description of the procurement:

The interconnected systems process information classified SECRET UE/EU SECRET. The secure operational interface shall be flexible with regard to the amount of both workstations and systems connected in order to allow for future evolution.

Due to the nature of the information being handled by the systems connecting to this operational interface, it is essential that the operational interface is highly secure and has been accredited by the National Security Authority of minimum one member state of the European Union. In addition, the high level of availability of the system is a mandatory requirement and the supplier should provide clear options for this.

The selected supplier will be expected to carry out a site review in order to design and deploy a tailor made solution, along with the training of the staff which will be using it.
